“The Most Dangerous Game”
WRAP (Sandwich) Questions

How does Rainsford’s attitude toward hunting change?

What is the difference between hunting humans and animals?

How does the fact that the story took place on an island contribute to the story?

How does the story act as a commentary on ethics and/or morality?

The title "The Most Dangerous Game" can be read in two different ways. How does each reading relate to the story?

How does the character of General Zaroff compare to the character of Hugh Pentecost in “A Kind of Murder?”

How does the character of Rainsford compare to the character of Hugh Pentecost in “A Kind of Murder?”

How does one character from “The Most Dangerous Game” compare with the character of Mr. Warren in “A Kind of Murder?”

Which theme in “A Kind of Murder” is much like a theme in “The Most Dangerous Game?”

How does the author of “The Most Dangerous Game” feel about the value of human life? How does this compare with the author’s view of life in “A Kind of Murder?”